Sung Jin-Woo's evolution reached unprecedented heights. His body, once contained within a mere realm, had now grown to encompass a billion realms, a scale beyond comprehension. The very fabric of his physical form expanded across the multiverse, filling the vast reaches of space with his presence.

Despite his monumental growth, Sung Jin-Woo retained the ability to compress his form, keeping his body within the confines of his True Absolute One Domain Realm and his throne. His wings, though enormous and incomprehensible to most, remained at a staggering 60 million—a display of his unwavering dominion over all things.

His body was now the largest, most gigantic being in existence. His form transcended dimensions, realms, and time. The sheer magnitude of his being defied all understanding. There was no entity, no force, no being that could compare to his power and size.

To the beings of the multiverse, his name was now synonymous with power, authority, and absolute dominance. There was no questioning his supremacy. His rule was without equal, and no being dared to challenge his divine authority.
